Erdos Institute Data Science Boot Camp, Spring 2024

Motivation

Problem:

- Generative AI systems produce responses by utilizing the most pertinent data at their disposal.
- Where does this relevant data come from? How applicable is it to the specific context?

Goal:

- Developing a rapid delivery system utilizing external contextual reference data.
- Capable of efficiently searching through and ranking over millions of text in response to user queries.
- Having mechanisms for assessing the qualitative performance of the retrieval outputs.

Distribution of Reddit Subreddits

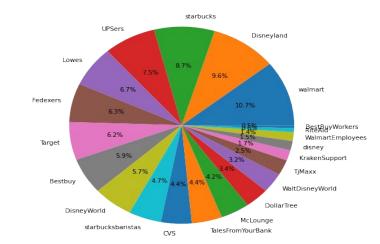

Data

 5 million public Reddit submissions and comments, with 21 subreddits

Challenge: accurately match the comments with submissions

Created a submission-based dataframe with 20613 observations

Visualizing Embeddings with t-SNE 100

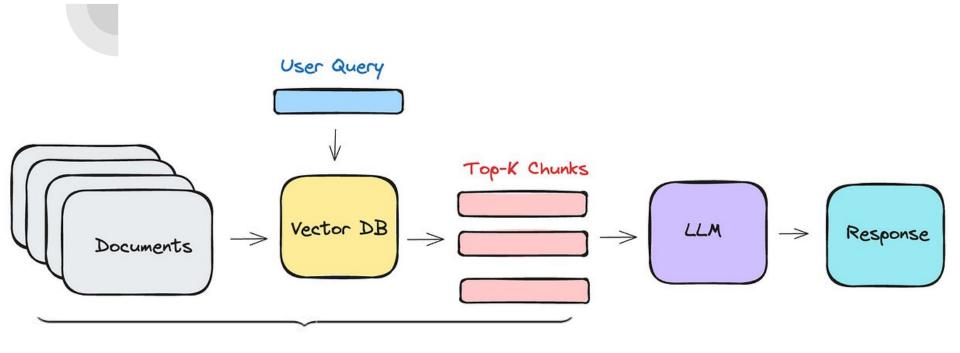

We test three embeddings for our RAG system.

All three show similar degrees of 2D separation when subreddits topics are more diverse (top panel) and when subreddit topics are more similar (bottom panel).

We use "all-MiniLM-L6-v2" for our embeddings due to its small size and fast performance.

Outline of Pipeline

Reddit Submissions: title, text, subreddit

LanceDB

Top N comments

Retrieval approach

- For each submission s, encode its "reddit_title [SEP] reddit_text # subreddit" to obtain a vector v_s .
- Given a query q, use the same embedding to encode it to obtain a vector v_q .

- Use KNN to find $v_{s_1}, v_{s_2}, ..., v_{s_n}$, the n submissions closest to v_q .
- Return the most upvoted comments (contexts) $c_1, c_2, ..., c_n$ of the submissions $s_1, s_2, ..., s_n$
- We evaluated the model with embedding = "all-miniLM-L6-v2" and n = 1
